

Board members and division residency requirements: What do you think?

During this winter's various public meetings and hearings, Paradise Irrigation District heard that some customers didn't like the residency requirements for board members.

Currently, the district is divided into five divisions; while all voters can cast a ballot for directors from any division, only one director may live in each division. This means that when a position is open for a director from a particular division, only candidates residing in that division can run for a slot on the board.

At their June meeting, PID directors looked at the policy. Legal counsel said if the division residency requirement were to be dropped, the only legal way to do so would be through state legislation, sponsored by a local assemblyman.

Before moving ahead with this step, the board majority voted to ask the community what it thinks. Customer response to this poll will help guide the board. Responses are needed by Sept. 14.

Should PID directors be elected from within divisions or from throughout the district?

Discover how PID is preparing for the future

What is Paradise Irrigation District doing to prepare for the future—whether that involves droughts, conservation or increasing our water supply? Answers to all of those questions (and lots more!) are available in the district's just-released Urban Water Management Plan.

PID staff and engineers completed the research and reporting to complete the 105-page document. The report is required by the state for all water districts supplying drinking water.

The report is available at the District Office as well as online at ParadiseIrrigation.com.

CHANGE IT.

I think there should be no division residency requirement for PID directors. This means candidates for PID director can live in any area of PID and the top vote-getters district-wide will win available board seats.

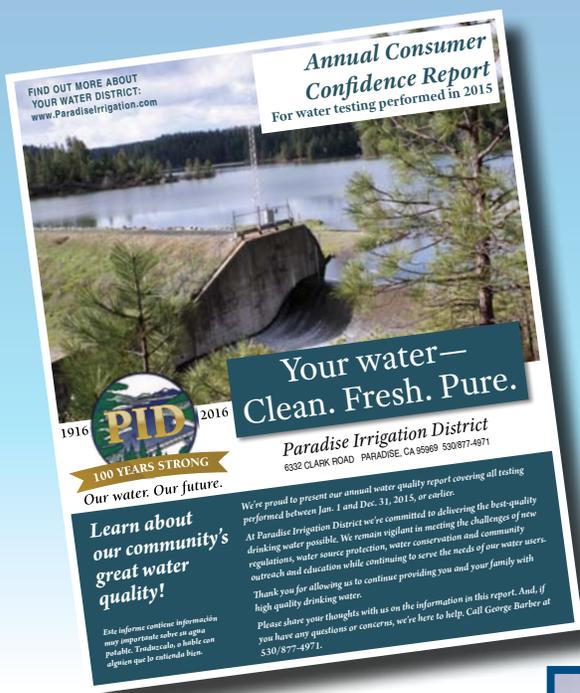

KEEP THINGS THE SAME.

I think candidates for PID director must live in a specific PID division. Voters will continue to be able to vote for any director throughout the district but candidates must have residency in their specific division.

Your water: Clean. Fresh. Pure.

That's the focus of the just-released PID Annual Consumer Confidence Report. The six-page report is available online at pidccr.com as well as in a printed version at the district office, 6332 Clark Road.

Included in the report is information about where PID's water originates, how it's treated and the district's water delivery system. Also included are sampling results of substances detected in your water.

The good news? In addition to tasting great, the sampling found no violations in any area. Drink up!

Wildfire? Turn off all of your sprinklers!

If a wildfire threatens, firefighters need every drop of water; please DO NOT leave your water on to sprinkle your roof or home.

DO leave connected water hoses and buckets of water outside your home.

Party in the Park

Paradise Irrigation District celebrates 100 years!

Summer 2016

Have you joined the celebration?

Just imagine what Paradise would be like today if no water district had formed 100 years ago!

As part of PID's year-long celebration of its centennial, the district is participating in Paradise Ridge Chamber of Commerce's weekly Party in the Park events held at the Paradise Community Park (near the old train depot).

Most Thursdays this summer, PID will have a booth at the 5:30 to 8:30 pm event. We're running a fun photo booth (grab a cartoon sign and a mustache and pose in front of a photo of the district's first office from 1916). We also have historic exhibits and a chance to answer a PID trivia question (the prize? An ice-cold bottle of water, of course!).

The folks above dropped by PID's booth in June to help us celebrate 100 years of providing great quality water to the ridge. Why not visit our booth this summer and have your photo taken while you learn more about your water district?
